How to Earn Your MCPD: Enterprise Applications Developer

MCPD: Enterprise Applications Developer candidates must first meet the requirements for the following three Microsoft Certified Technology Specialist (MCTS) credentials for the Microsoft .NET Framework 2.0. The MCTS Credentials consist of four exams.*

- ⇒ MCTS: .NET Framework 2.0 Web Applications
- ⇒ MCTS: .NET Framework 2.0 Windows Applications
- ⇒ MCTS: .NET Framework 2.0 Distributed Applications

After earning these credentials, candidates may earn their MCPD: Enterprise Applications Developer certification by passing one additional required exam.

If you are a Microsoft Certified Solutions Developer (MCS D) on Microsoft .NET, you can upgrade to the MCPD: Enterprise Applications Developer certification by taking two upgrade exams. By passing these upgrade exams you will also automatically obtain all three of the MCTS prerequisites.

If you are a Microsoft Certified Application Developer (MCAD) there is no direct upgrade path to the MCPD: Enterprise Applications Developer certification. But you can apply the MCAD upgrade exams to MCPD: Windows Developer and MCPD: Web Developer to your exam path.

If you have already passed Exam 70–551: UPGRADE: MCAD Skills to MCPD: Web Developer by Using the Microsoft .NET Framework, you may obtain the MCPD: Enterprise Applications Developer certification by passing the following additional exams:
